

The state of Ohio has received $54 million in federal LIHEAP funding to help low-income citizens pay the costs of heating and insulating their homes.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services released $1.2 billion in LIHEAP funds now in order to ensure that states such as Ohio has the resources available to help needy families through the winter. LIHEAP helps more than six million low-income households in America deal with energy costs.

Individuals who are interested in applying for energy assistance should contact their local LIHEAP agencies. For more information, please go to the LIHEAP website or click here to view the LIHEAP online brochure.
